Task Of Operating Efficient Telephone Systems Described

F. G. Webber, Superintendent of Bell Telephone Co. Addresses Com.

PROGRESS STRESSED

Almost a Million Telephones Now in Use in Ont. and Que.

The huge task of the 800 telephone companies in Ontario and Quebec in operating almost a million telephones was described by F. G. Webber, superintendent of the Montreal division of the Bell Telephone Company, in his address at the Commercial Society luncheon held in the Union Grill at one o'clock yesterday afternoon.

The momentous decision of those first in charge of the telephone to sell service rather than telephones was pointed out to be the real reason why development has been so spectacular. The wisdom of this decision is evidenced by the fact that today no commodity sold is as profitable to the buyer as is telephone service, the speaker continued.

Huge Organization
Narrowing down to the organization of the system, Mr. Webber pointed out that the country is divided into districts, one of which is Montreal. The financial, auditing, plant, traffic and commercial departments carry on the service in these districts.

The financial and auditing departments look after the finances of the company while the commercial department has the very difficult task of estimating the expenditures necessary for replacements and thus must determine what revenue is necessary to meet these expenditures.

Traffic Distributed
The task of the traffic department is to distribute the traffic evenly over (Continued on Page 2)

Societe Francaise Convenes In R.V.C.

Prof. du Roure Outlines The Development of French Songs at Meeting

"French Songs" was the topic of an address delivered in R.V.C. yesterday afternoon by Professor du Roure, head of the French department. The speaker outlined the process of song-development, describing this process as a struggle between music and verse with the almost inevitable triumph of music. One may well say "everything begins in song," a mother's lullaby illustrates the possibility of making simple words beautiful through music, while patriotic, military and historical songs are remembered, not for their poetical value but because of the verve and dash of their tunes. Operas such as Carmen are comparatively insignificant when divorced from their music.

During the process of song-development, verse may become independent of the music developing along its own line to become lyrical poetry. The lyrical ballads sung by the troubadours of France during the Middle Ages were essentially poetical. This was poetry for poetry's sake, aside from its musical quality.

Only in the case of satiric verse is this process reversed: here the importance of the air is entirely eclipsed by the wit and sarcasm of the words. New song-books were a feature of song-song which was conducted by Mme. Furness with M. Hadwin at the piano. Connie Hobbs, President of the Societe, was in the chair and presided at tea at the close of the meeting.

Theological Aspect Of Orient Depicted

Speaker States Law of Cause And Effect Prevails In All Phenomena

DR. KIANG SPEAKS

Head of Chinese Department Delivers Last of Unemployment Lectures

"The law of cause and effect is the fundamental law of all Oriental teachings," stated Professor Kiang Kang-hu in his address on "The Orient." This was a lecture, the last of a series, given every Thursday afternoon in Strathcona Hall for the benefit of the unemployed.

"It is difficult to separate civilization from religion," he continued. The religions which have been important in China, enumerated by him are many in number. None, however, have been of outstanding importance, since in China there is no state religion, and consequently, they are mainly teachings of sober philosophy, from which the fundamental law of that cause and effect, has been evolved.

Applied To Conduct
This law, which prevails in all phenomena, is to be taken not only in the abstract sense, but can also be applied to mental, spiritual, and human conduct. It is a natural law and especially applicable to China, because of the existence, there, of a collective life. Although the Orient has been afflicted by much poverty, the depression of the Western World has never (Continued on Page 2)

Cycle Trip Through England Described

Professor Tells of Visit to Historical Sites

At a meeting of the Canadian Credit Men's Institute, Paul McCullagh, Professor of Classics, gave a description of his recent bicycle trip through England.

In his journey from Edinburgh to Land's End, Professor McCullagh saw many of the ruins left by the Roman occupation. Most of the lecture consisted of a review of the results of this occupation, both military and civil.

Indoor Rifle Club

At a meeting of the Indoor Rifle Club held yesterday in the Engineering building it was decided that meetings should henceforth be held on Thursday instead of Saturday afternoons. The reason for this decision was to accommodate members who wish to go skiing on Saturday. During the coming holidays the meetings will not be held, but there will be shooting at the Montreal High School Gym.

Players' Club To Produce "He Who Gets Slapped" Next

LAST night Ronald Leatham was appointed Production Manager for the next Players' Club performance. A complete reorganization in methods of production is planned and particular stress will be laid upon the technical and business sides of the undertaking and with this view in mind plans are already underway for this production.

The play, which will be presented on February the ninth, tenth and eleventh, is "He Who Gets Slapped," by Leonid Andreyev. The committee feels that with a more strenuous effort the general standard of the entire performance may be considerably raised.

To ensure this, extra effort work is being started immediately and all appointments will be made before Christmas. The preliminary details will be arranged during the holidays and all committees will be in operation by January the sixth.

House Of Commons Club Holds Meeting

Papers On Psychology And Physiology Read By Students

DEVELOPMENT TRACED

First Laboratory Tests In Psychology Were Made In 1879

Papers on psychology and physiology were read at the meeting of the House of Commons Club last night by Babs Goulding and Ragnild Tait, respectively. Psychology was defined as a science of nature and consequently a subject which attracts the introspective and abstract souls. Physiology on the other hand was described as being a study of normal functions and phenomena of living things and consequently a science that appeals to the practical man.

In her paper on psychology, Babs Goulding stressed the fact that it began as a side branch of philosophy and that it is one of the youngest sciences. The first psychological laboratory experiments were performed in 1879 while the famous Bene' scale for intelligence testing was developed in 1905. It was found out, however, that it is necessary to test more than intelligence in order to analyse a person, the speaker said.

Talk on Physiology

In her talk on physiology, Ragnild Tait emphasized the importance of the studies of Johannes Muller on the sense organs. The doctrines that each nerve can produce only one kind of a sensation, irrespective of the object which stimulates it, was devised by him and proved basic for several generations.

It was the physiological discovery of the two different types of nerve fibres—one for conveying messages to the central nervous system, the other for conveying messages out—that really gave experimental psychology its first impetus. It was pointed out.

The meeting was held at the home of Mr. Forsay.

Valery's Poetry Has Extensive Influence Among Literateurs

Professor Noad Lectured On Famous Character At Tudor Hall

USES VERBAL MUSIC

Attempt At Escape From Poetry To Ordinary Life Proved Futile

Although the bulk of his work is small, although his style is extremely difficult for the average reader, and although the editions of his poems are small and expensive, Paul Valery nevertheless stands at the head of modern European poets, stated Professor Alys S. Noad, of the Department of English, who spoke last night in Tudor Hall. This lecture was one of a series on Modern English Literature, and is the last before Christmas.

The influence of Paul Valery is widely marked, his name enters into discussion of poetry in every country of Europe, and a great deal of material has been written on his life, said Professor Noad.

Needs Stimulation

He was educated at University of Montpellier, where he came into contact with Pierre Louys and Andre Gide, who influenced him to produce poetry. The speaker pointed out how much of Valery's work came as the result of outside stimulus; all his works are "made to order."

In Paris he became associated with the Symbolists, but about 1900 dropped out of the world of letters, and worked as a clerk. Some fifteen years later Gide urged him to collect and publish a few works, as did several other (Continued on Page 4)

Outlines Life And Character Of Poet

J. B. Thomson Spoke On Scott At Mechanics' Institute

Coming of good family, a family of fighters, Sir Walter Scott always strove to uphold the traditions of his forefathers. James B. Thomson, past president of the St. James Literary Society, pointed out, at a lecture delivered to the Mechanics' Institute last night.

Sir Walter spent the early years of his life among various Scottish surroundings, the speaker went on to say; first with his grandparents on a little country farm and then with his parents in Edinburgh, young Walter learned Scottish life from all angles.

At the old Royal High School in Edinburgh, young Scott behaved like any young red-blooded boy. The school was divided into quarters, between which gang wars took place, stones, sticks, and fists being the weapons. Scott was always among the first in the fray and the last to leave; he inflicted head wounds upon less fortunate, by reason of his deadly aim. Scotland, especially in the vicinity of Edinburgh, bears witness to many places and incidents mentioned in Scott's works. The speaker showed slides of Edinburgh and the River Tweed, quoting passages from the works of the great writer, explaining both his thoughts and those of the author.

Scott's life-long dream was to build for himself an estate on the banks of the Tweed. After obtaining his baronetcy, Sir Walter, while in one of the more prosperous periods of his career, financially speaking, bought a section of land and erected the castle of Abbotsford. Throughout the remaining years of his life, it pleased the writer to be called "Sir Walter Scott, Baronet, of Abbotsford." Much in keeping with his wishes, it was in this same home that he died, a century ago.

Graff To Speak

Lectures on Dutch Literature Will Be Given

Towards the end of February, Professor Graff of the German Department at McGill University, will give three lectures on Dutch Literature. Professor Graff is the Dutch extraction, speaking not only his native language but also German, French and English.

These lectures, which are to be given under the auspices of the Department of Germanics and the Department of Extra-Mural Relations, are divided into three parts. The first lecture is entitled "Literary Activities in the Low Countries in the Middle Ages." The second one will consist of "The Renaissance and the Classical Age of Dutch Literature." The last lecture will be a talk on Vondel, Holland's greatest poet.

History Group At Conclave Will Be Headed By Adair

AT the next meeting of the American Historical Association which convenes on December 27, 28 and 29 in Toronto, Professor E. R. Adair of the McGill Department of History will be the chairman of the medieval section. The other representative from McGill will be Professor T. W. L. MacDermot.

This is the first time that the American Historical Association in its fifty years of existence has met outside of the United States and this has been done at the invitation of the University of Toronto. A failure of the convention will be a dinner given at Hart House. Fully 300 persons are expected to attend the meeting. The Association will divide into groups for discussion on ancient, medieval and economic history, the national interests of the United States and public archives.

SPACE LIMITED

Directors Hope For Large Attendance; R.V.C. Common Room to be Used

The Workshop Department of the Players' Club are presenting three plays Monday evening in the Common Room of the R.V.C. The actors have been preparing these plays or the past three weeks and today's rehearsal will be the last before the final dress rehearsal. In spite of the fact that those who are taking part are acting for the first time, the directors are quite confident of the success of Monday night's productions.

Unfortunately the accommodation in the R.V.C. Common Room is very limited but the stage space available is going to be adapted in such a way that the plays will lose nothing on account of the simplified setting.

Expect Support

The actors and directors hope that the efforts of their labors will be rewarded by a large crowd attending. They also hope that for this once the men students of McGill will discard their shyness and enter the portals of R.V.C.

McGill Actors Give Good Performance In Choral Operetta

Mary Friedman, Jack Waud, And Bob Freeman Dominated Throughout

MALE CHORUS WEAK

Dorothy MacKay And Adele Lortie Help In Successful Production

Set in lavish and colorful costumes, against scenery far better designed and constructed than that of most student productions, the "Yeomen of the Guard" went through its third and best performance of the week in Moyse Hall last night. In front of a strong female chorus, and a rather weak male one, Bob Freeman and Mary Friedman dominated, by virtue of several song and dance combinations that delighted the house.

The former played Jack Point, the quipping, punning, ill-starred jester, and he played it with gusto and imagination. Among the males he was pre-eminent, and a welcome relief to the other principals of his sex. For with a few exceptions the remainder of the men lacked force and emphasis.

Head Jaller Stars

One of these exceptions is notably Jack Waud, the jaller who failed to jail. His grotesque humor was admirably done, and he easily proved that acting, and not only singing, is essential to an opera of this sort.

Mary Friedman, with a voice sweet and true, and a distinct grace of movement, was the perfect companion to Jack Point. Their duet of "The Merryman and his Maid"—one of the highlights of Gilbert and Sullivan achievement—left the anxiously anticipating patron nearly satisfied.

Dorothy MacKay played the part of Phoebe with charm and a subdued humor. She steadily increased in potency throughout the performance. (Continued on Page 4)

Montreal Orchestra Will Give Concert

Maurice Ouderet To Be Soloist At Recital

The Montreal Orchestra will give its fifty-third concert on Sunday, December 18, at His Majesty's Theatre. Maurice Ouderet, concert-master of the orchestra, will be the soloist and will play the Brans Violin Concerto. The program which has been arranged for the occasion has been given careful consideration and as a result is of a special nature.

Maurice Ouderet, Belgium born, began the study of the violin at the age of eight. A year later he became a student of the Mons Conservatory of Music at Brussels, there he won many prizes and distinctions. Shortly after his arrival in Montreal, he was appointed to a professorship at the McGill Conservatorium of Music and to a post in l'Institut Pedagogique. He has, as well, been a valued member of the Montreal Orchestra since its inception.

The orchestra will be under the direction of Douglas Clarke and the complete program is as follows:

1. Overture: Hansel and Gretel... Humperdinck; 2. Concerto on D. Op. 77... Brans... for violin and orchestra; 1. Allegro; 2. Adagio; 3. Allegro giocoso ma non troppo vivace. Solo violin: Maurice Ouderet. 3. Ballet Suite: The Good-humoured Ladies... Scarlatti-Tommasini, Presto; Allegro; Andante; Non presto in tempo di ballo. 4. Procession... Howells. 5. Huldigung March... Grieg.

Hope Springs Eternal

McGILL is undergoing a period of house-cleaning. Old societies are going out; new ones are coming in. The last two years have seen the launching of at least two campus organizations; that have blossomed and flourished wonderfully—a strong argument against our over-discussed student apathy.

Monday, pending the successful outcome of the preliminary meeting, a new publication will have passed from a mere possibility into fact. Until now McGill has had the unenviable distinction of being the one University of primary standing in Canada without a representative university magazine. Ventures of a literary nature have come and gone in the past, and today, McGill is still without its literary magazine.

There is no reason why this latest venture should follow the way of others in the past. In the University, and among our recent graduates, we are considerably supplied with talent—some yet to be unearthed. The mistakes of the defunct McGill will be so much more experience to the Captains of the Fate of the new publication. The financial end—the most delicate part of the machinery—can be successfully controlled if placed in the hands of a competent business manager. One question remains: Does student support exist? The result of this venture will answer the question.

Too Much Pessimism

IN days of yore, we were, as is evident now, suffering from an overdose of optimism, gullibility, conceit, and self-satisfaction. Our own world was the only world; our civilization, the apex of all previous cultures. Progress towards an ultimate Utopia seemed inevitable. Such an attitude was deplorable, for we saw no reason to guard against catastrophe; no cause to plan for the future.

All that is over now. But the experience of the past few years has not had the sobering effect of making us analyse ourselves and our institutions, with rational and cool observation. Rather we have fallen victim to just the other extreme.

In place of unreasonable optimism, we now have unadulterated pessimism; the latter is no less dangerous than the former. Politically, socially and economically the world is adversely affected by a desultory spirit of depression and hopelessness. Some show it by sulking off to a corner where they deride any of those who may enthusiastically attempt to do something worthwhile. Others show their pessimism by becoming desperate and panic stricken. It is they who are prepared not only to amputate the diseased limbs of our political bodies but to overthrow all existing institutions.

Students of the subject are prepared to agree that in the economic sphere, the return to prosperity is being unduly retarded by the pinching policy of wage-cutting, stringent economies and hoarding—all of which are caused by a pessimistic outlook towards the future. Cautiously people keep what money they have hidden in their stockings. Few have the courage to spend or invest and thus start the wheels of industry revolving once more.

Socially, the effect is no less apparent. Scowls, ill-humour and lack of consideration for others are shown as each man becomes immersed in his own gloomy forebodings. Bitter cynicism clouds the thought and expressions of people.

Pessimism is allright in its time, but this isn't the time. In the "good old days" when speculators blindly expected the value of their shares to skyrocket without limit, when "newly-rich" magnates smugly bloated over their own success won by "genius" when the future was expected to look after itself without any help from us, when politicians were given a free rein because of our own apathy and indifference, then was the time when the pessimist should have been heeded.

All that is reversed now. As do individuals, so does society suffer from an inferiority complex. Confidence should be the keynote as we endeavour to strike the happy medium between optimism and pessimism. We were swept off our feet by prosperity, let us not sink to gloomy dejection at adversity. We can do with more faith, we can do with more charity, but above all we can do with more hope.

-OF CABBAGES AND KINGS

Everyman's Creed

NOW that the Daily is under efficient management at last, a good columnist again comes into his own. And inasmuch as a columnist, if he wishes to be able to write regularly, must be inconsistent; and in order to be inconsistent must have certain standards to be inconsistent with, it would be well if I listed forthwith all my beliefs. I am just a regular college boy god wot with an unrequited passion for rah rahs and the modern equivalent for boop-doop-a-doops, and so my credo is the credo of us all.

- (1) Shag is a good coach.
- (2) The Daily is run by a clique.
- (3) Students do not drink b-r; but b-v-t propagandists tries to hint that students do drink b-r.
- (4) It is forbidden to smoke in the Arts Building except when there is something on in Moyse Hall and then it is permissible to throw cigarettes on the floor of the Arts Building.
- (5) The Daily is run by the Students' Council.
- (6) They were a tough bunch in them days.
- (7) The theological students are still a tough bunch.
- (8) The Daily is perfectly free and runs itself.

Tea For Theologs

READING the Daily the other day—more from habit than for any other reason—I came upon the following frank statement under the heading "Theologs Hold Tea":

"The first tea is more in the nature of an experiment."

And that is exactly the trouble with the tea—and the coffee too—which is served at these orgies of good fellowship. There is far too much of the experimental about it. It's most unfair. Experiment with our government by all means, with our art, or with our tariffs, but in Heaven's name I ask it, don't experiment with what has to go into stomachs.

A course, in tea-drinking, however, is a distinct necessity to a theological student. To adhere desperately to a filthy bowl of prostituted water, against which has been flopped a gushy amorphous blob of cake, and what is more, to eat and drink this ambrosia and nectar of the One God Babbitt—these are not tasks that can be approached lightly and without preparation.

But don't discourage the boys with experimental tea.

Criticizing Critics

THERE are a good many young cubs who seem to become speedily crazed by the clatter-clatter of the rebuke. One said fellow (the term is not mine, but is borrowed from another eminent columnist) spewed out the ensuing doggerel the other night:

A critic y-clept Morgan Powell
Held knowledge of sex to be fowell;
At O'Neill and Lawrence
He expressed grave abhorrence
In the shape of a ponderous growl.

Whence the insufferable conceit that can inspire this immature impertinence? Whence the assumption of infallibility, the delusion of power, that promotes the expression of these unfounded opinions? Whence the prejudice, the unreasoning bitterness and the uncompromising dogmatism? Whence the claim to literary dictatorship, to a monopoly of critical ability—say! who am I criticizing anyway?

Ray For Constitutions

PLATITUDE:—A constitution is a necessity to the efficient functioning of any complex organization.

Well, the former news editor of this rag was suspended a certain Monday night over a week ago. But he was suspended unconstitutionally. The rest of the Managing Board and all the associate editors resigned. And so all the next day the only person left on the editorial board was the scape-goat, news-editor who had been "dismissed," poor boy.

But Wednesday night it appeared that the resignations of the Editor-in-Chief and the Managing Board had not been accepted. They were suspended it is true, but the meeting that suspended them was unconstitutional. The associate editors were reappointed, but unconstitutionally. So from Wednesday night to the next Tuesday night while the Managing Board were resting upon their haunches—and the associate editors were running the paper—the Managing Board were really in office and the associate editors were "non est."

It's a good thing no one ever reads the constitution. But anyway, now you know what the reporter meant when he wrote that the office of the President of the Students' Society "endures" throughout the college year.

Kiss And Don't Kill

DOCTORS, who have the tendency of all professional men to contradict themselves, have recently come forward with the contention that kissing is less detrimental to the health than handshaking. Certainly there seems to be nothing unhealthy about kissing, unless the recipient turns out to be someone else's woman. Handshaking is undoubtedly bad. There are slimy hands that send a chronic shiver up the spine and down again, there are hands with blobs of chewing gum in the palm, and chewing gum is definitely contagious. And the phillistine who pumped the white, useless hand of a society matron with friendly vigor became infected with something that technical men call "ostracism."

But neither kissing or handshaking is as dangerous to the health as back-slapping. The ill-effects are not felt so much by he who gets slapped—he is not likely to suffer anything worse than a broken spine or a bitten tongue. But he who slaps—the ravages of disease swiftly strike him down. He often breaks out with black eyes, or broken jaws—with broken neck, with caved in head—alas, this is but the musings of an idealist.

Re The Union

IT is impossible to say what exactly was the real purpose of the man who donated the McGill Union to the students, but I think we would be safe to say this: that he did not intend it to be merely a dormitory, a restaurant, and an office. He may have intended it to be a hang-out for the lads, some place where they feel like gathering, and talking. But who loafs in the Union? Only the executives of the campus organizations that have their headquarters there. And save for the billiard and snooker fans, no one but these executives feel at home within the walls. "The McGill Union is primarily a club," says the handbook.

Now the McGill Union is primarily a bedroom. Of course, there are several students who by virtue of their office simply have to sleep therein. But why is it necessary to provide sleeping-space for several other—what shall we call them?

THE THEATRES PRESENT

Palace Theatre

Motherhood comes in for its share of glory in the First National picture "Life Begins" which is now at the Palace Theatre with Loretta Young and Eric Linden in the leading roles.

"Life Begins" is a daring film as far as the theme goes, but handled in such honest taste as to make it one of the most human pictures that the screen has yet given us. The action of the entire picture takes place in the maternity ward of a large hospital where several wives of varied walks and circumstances of life mingle in the ward, bound together by their one bond of human sympathy and interest—Motherhood.

The cast is made up of Loretta Young, Eric Linden, Aline McMahon, Frank McHugh, Walter Walker and many more none the less prominent. Added attractions comprise the first authentic pictures of "Moscow, Heart of Soviet Russia" and two short features.

Loew's Theatre

Commencing tomorrow, Loew's Theatre presents Robert Montgomery and Tallulah Bankhead in "Unfaithful" while the vaudeville bill is headed by Stuart and Lash in a novelty offering entitled "Believe It or Nuts." "Faithless" is a drama of the penniless rich based on an original story by Mildred Cram. The plot concerns Carol Morgan who accustomed all her life to wealth and position finds herself penniless. With her lover she attempts to fight her way upward but they are relentlessly carried down stream together. Among those who appear in the cast besides the stars are High Herbert, Louise Closser Hale, Anna Appel and others.

Besides the Stuart and Lash feature, the vaudeville bill also includes Carl Shaw in "Gotta Get a Girl," Everett Sanderson & Co. and Janet May. Several short subjects complete the program.

Capitol Theatre

The Capitol presents its usual double bill next week with two excellent features. Will Rogers will be seen in his latest picture "Too Busy To Work" in which he is said to qualify as an emotional actor as well as a comedian. He portrays the role of a happy-go-lucky tramp who roams from place to place in search of his wife and daughter and the man who stole them while he was in the trenches. Marlon Nixon plays the role of the daughter.

The second feature presents "Sherlock Holmes" with Olive Brook in the title role supported by Miriam Jordan and Ernest Torrence. In conjunction with Scotland Yard Holmes works to destroy the arch enemy Moriarty and his band of gangsters. The story tells how he finally succeeds in exterminating the gang and in sending the leader to the death cell. Romantic interest is added by the love of Holmes for Alice Faulkner, played by the beautiful English actress Miriam Jordan.

Princess Theatre

Commencing Saturday, another outstanding programme will be presented at the Princess Theatre, as in the past two special feature pictures will be shown together with the usual short subjects. As their feature attraction the management will present "The Crusader" with Evelyn Brent, H. B. Warner, Lew Cody, Ned Sparks, Walter Byron and Marseline Day in the stellar roles. Philip Brandon, district attorney, attempts to stamp out crime and vice but due to a star reporter of the town's leading newspaper becomes involved in charges against his wife and sister.

The second picture, "Hearts of Humanity" is from the pen of Olga Printzlau tells the story of a man's struggle against fate in the melting pot of New York's lower East Side. Leading parts will be enacted by Jean Hersholt, Jackie Searle, J. Farrell MacDonald, Claudia and Charles Delaney.

His Majesty's Theatre

EDGAR WALLACE
(Author of "The Green Pack")

Edgar Wallace, who wrote "The Green Pack," the play with which the distinguished actor-manager, Percy Hutchinson, will open his third Canadian tour at His Majesty's on Monday, December 26th preferred racing to writing, and was to be found at almost every important meet, notwithstanding his prolific output of novels, stories, plays, articles, dramatic criticism and racing tips. He once borrowed a sovereign (£4.86) to go to Ascot, and came back with £1,700 (£8,262). Wallace jocularly claimed to have made more out of racing than from play-writing. He once made £2,500 (£12,150) in three days at Newmarket. And yet he never saw a horse win in his own colours. He was present at all the successful first-nights of his plays in London with the exception of "The Green Pack," which was produced the night before the author died in Hollywood, California.

Cinéma Imperial

"Cendrillon De Paris," an excellent sentimental comedy, with Andre Roanne, Colette Darfeuille and Janine Murray in the leading roles, and "Le Fils De L'Autre," a powerful drama of love in which Jeanne Helbing takes the lead makes up the double programme which the Imperial presents all next week. These two pictures are the highest type of French motion picture. Another excellent group of short subjects completes the programme.

Cinéma de Paris

Starting Saturday the Cinema De Paris presents "Le Dernier Choc" with Jean Murat and Daniele Parola, a drama of the sea by that great producer of sea pictures, Jacques de Baroncelli, who also produced "Pêcheurs D'Islande" and "Roi De La Mer." Baroncelli has made a picture which breathes the very atmosphere of the sea. The characters are portrayed with accuracy; the settings are realistic and exact; the photography is of the highest quality. It is a film that one cannot afford to miss.

the various lines in order that the best possible service may be rendered while the plant department is in charge of all equipment; the latter division thus provides the commercial department with information concerning the expenditures which may be anticipated.

In this regard it was pointed out that estimates must be made of the increase movement of the population of the city in order that the company will be prepared to extend the service whenever necessary. Due to the fact that wires of hairlike thickness are now used, it is now possible to run 8000 through a cable and so great saving is made, the speaker stated.

J. Gordon Fulcher, president of the Commercial Society, introduced the speaker. Guests of the Society included Sir Arthur Currie and many of the professors of the School of Commerce.

resignation as President of the Students' Society to take effect immediately.

At a meeting of the Students' Council held in November of this year a resolution was passed to the effect that if only one person is nominated for President of the Society, the nomination date shall be extended for 48 hours. But although this was approved it has not yet received the ratification of the McGill Corporation. Accordingly, the date for the closing of nominations will be in accordance with the Constitution, revised to 1931. In this way an acclamation to the post of President of the Students' Council is yet possible.

Theological Aspect Of Orient Depicted

been experienced there. They have no problem of unemployment, which presents a most formidable economic and social consideration here. This can be accounted for by two principle reasons.

Absence of Machinery
The first explanation can be attributed to the absence of machinery in the Orient. This has been a vital factor in replacing human labour. It runs counter to the ancient theory that the harder you work, the greater will be your remuneration. Under the western system, you do not reap full benefit from your own labour, and overproduction does not, as was formerly believed, of necessity result in over-plenty.

The existence of a family, or clan system has gone far to prevent the present economic depression from being reproduced in the Orient. There, the clan organization constitutes what is our local government but unlike ours is not subject to change. It controls all the positive functions of government, and except in times of great disaster does not seek or expect outside relief. "What will be the future of the Orient, and the future of the world?" professor Kiang demanded. To find mental comfort, even in the depression, he strongly counsels hard work and simple living as an infallible remedy.

McGill Aggregation In Fine Condition For Tonight's Engagement

HARVARD TILT NEXT TOMORROW EVENING

ON the morn of the great struggle between Old Eli and McGill, confidence in the Redmen's ability to do more than hold their own is felt and conviction of a close game with the Redmen given the edge in the play seems to be the consensus of local sportdom's sentiment. The condition of the Redmen is rather above par as their one-sided victory over the Columbus squad indicates. Their brand of hockey to date has shown them to be up to the best hockey traditions of the University.

The Ellmen, ever famous for a do or die spirit, can be depended on to supply the Redmen with a keen brand of hockey coupled with a team that is in excellent condition. Practices under Coach Holcombe, have been progressing for some lengthy time, and the strategy he has given them makes them threatening opposition.

Newcomers Show Class
Loss of several of their veteran players has weakened the Ellmen considerably, but the newcomers to the team filling the gaps left by graduation are players of sterling mettle and hockeyists of first class ability. Coach Holcombe will probably send the following men on the ice: Townsend, goal; Barnes, left defence; Parker, right defence; Rodd, Centre; Colby, left wing; Fletcher, right wing.

Following the game with the Ellmen Bobby Bell's puckchasers will entrain for Cambridge to play Harvard in what promises to be a bitter tilt. The Harvard puckchasers, under Coach Gubbs have been showing excellent form. Greeted by a turnout of some forty-eight men, Coach Stubbs has

Red Squad In Final Tilt For Crown

Play Varsity Tomorrow At Hart House Pool In Deciding Game

HOLD GOAL MARGIN OVER RIVAL SQUAD

THIS afternoon at 3.20, the McGill senior water polo team under the supervision of Coach George Vickerson boards the train at the Windsor Station, headed for Toronto, where they engage the Toronto Varsity poloists on Saturday night, in the final game of the home-and-home series for the intercollegiate polo crown. The Redmen take a one goal margin into this deciding match, as a result of their 3-2 victory over the Blueboys last Saturday in the K. of C. tank, and as total goals in the two games decide the winner, they hold but a slim edge over their rivals.

The Red team has been practicing diligently for the coming engagement, and do not intend to permit any overconfidence on their part to spoil their chances of wresting the intercollegiate crown from the present incumbents, Toronto Varsity. They will extend all their energies to putting their best into tomorrow's affair, and so return a championship lost to them by faulty play last season.

Hart House Pool Large

The Hart House pool is of larger proportions than the McGill home tank, as it measures 35 feet in width as compared to the 25 feet of the Columbus pool. At the same time, a projecting ledge at a three foot depth on either side of the tank, makes it difficult for a player unaccustomed to this feature. The Blueboys therefore, have a slight advantage, as far as playing conditions are concerned.

However, it is worthy of note, that last year, after having been defeated by the score of 7-3 in their first match with Toronto in the Columbus pool, the Redmen tied the Varsity aggregation two-all in the return match at Toronto.

Team Intact

The team that defeated Varsity last week in Montreal remains practically intact for tomorrow's all important encounter. Only Freeman, who provided most of the scoring punch in the first match, will be missing. His place will be filled by McLean.

Chuck Wayland will guard the nets as usual, and if he shows the same steady form which has characterized his last few city league games, the Red team need not worry. Bob Shaw and Chick Davis are back at their regular positions of defence, and coupled with Doug Cross at half, should provide dependable opposition against the best that Varsity can send against them.

Forwards Fast

Mark Stein will swim centre, flanked by Phil French and Gordy McLean, two effective and fast swimming forwards. It will be up to them to see that the necessary goals pass the Blue netminder.

The line-up is completed with the addition of the two substitutes per-

Keen Bouts Planned In Weekly Tourney

Tam Fyshe And Berkowitz Meet in 118 lb. Feature Clash

Coach Bert Light continues his popular series of exhibition bouts by presenting the fifth meet at the Field House, Monday evening at 8 o'clock. The card will feature both novices and veterans and should be interesting from the opening bell to curfew. The boxers are all in fine condition, there being no aggravating injuries reported from the previous meets.

The headliner on Monday appears to be the clash between Tam Fyshe and Berkowitz at 118-lbs. Berkowitz has done little sparring since his trip to Kingston with the team last year but should make things interesting for the doughty Tam. Another highlight is the 175-lb. bout between MacGregor and either Brenhouse or Gilbert. The coach has few worries about filling this post as all three boys are top-notch performers.

McLennan, tall and rangy battler who has won more than his share of plaudits in previous encounters, will tangle with Greenshields at 165-lbs. Joey Tannenbaum, returning to the ring after a long lay-off, is attempting to disprove the adage that "they never come back." He started off in the right way with a neat victory last Monday night.

The program follows:
118 lbs.—Fyshe vs. Berkowitz.
125 lbs.—Tannenbaum vs. Black.
135 lbs.—Shearer vs. Nobbs.
MacGregor vs. A. N. Other.
Hatfield vs. Jamieson.
155 lbs.—Hand vs. Archibald.
Johnston vs. Gildea.
Corbett vs. A. N. Other.
145 lbs.—Swift vs. Crutchlow.
175 lbs.—MacGregor vs. Brenhouse or Gilbert.
165 lbs.—McLennan vs. Greenshields.

Red Puckmen Meet Trenholme Tonight

Expected to Offer Sharp Opposition to Intermediate Team

PLAY FIRST CONTEST

THE West End Intermediate Hockey League will get away to a start this evening, at the Loyola rink, when McGill lines up against Trenholme Park, in the opener, and Adanacs cross sticks with the Caughnawaga Indians in the second contest. The Redmen will have their work cut out for them as Trenholme Park were last year's champions and are a fast, resourceful squad. McGill, however, will also be a fast sextette, as was shown in their game with U. of M. last Wednesday, when they took the Frenchmen into camp by a score of 4-3.

With Ross Wilson, Captain of the Bellman, and either Wilson or Owen on the defence, Trenholme Park should find it very hard to reach the McGill goal, which will be guarded by either Moore, Tennant or Grant. On the forward line the regulars will be McDuff, Tait and Griffiths, who gave the U. of M. rear-guard so much trouble on Wednesday. Calder, Johnston, Corbett and Wight are slated for forward relief duty.

Uncertain of Strength

Little is known about this year's Trenholme Park team, except that they are expected to be a great scoring threat and a reliable contender for first place honors when this loop draws to a close.

Sunday Evening, December 18th, 7.30 p.m.

Sermon Subject:

"BELIEF IN GOD"

What does the word "God" mean?—A principle? A person?—or is the word flung out vaguely towards a haunting but unobtainable idea?

Why do some clever publicists sneer at the belief in God, whereas philosophers of the highest rank (Plato, Aristotle, Descartes, Leibnitz, Spinoza, Kant, Hegel, Bergson and Whitehead) are so fascinated by Him?

What is the present value of the famous "proofs" of God's existence? and what is the real ground of belief?

Is God related to the universe as a composer's mind to a symphony? And is the Wordsworthian approach to nature comparable to grasping the meaning of music?

How far is present misery, individual and social, due to ignorance of God?

Mr. Clare will discuss these and allied questions.

mitted under intercollegiate water polo ruling. Lorne Shapiro will substitute at the half position, while Jim Worrall, lanky forward will fill in as forward. The latter should have no difficulty in keeping his feet off the bottom of the Hart House pool, whose shallowest depths measure six feet.

Hope For Victory

In all, the team provides a compact unit without individual stars and with the initial victory of the series to strengthen them, a return of the intercollegiate polo title to Old McGill is looked forward to.

The following is the complete lineup:

Goal	Wayland
Defence	Shaw
Defence	Davis
Half	Cross
Centre	Stein
Forward	French
Forward	McLean
Alternate	Shapiro
Alternate	Worrall

and, partnered with the jaller in "Were I thy Bride," made that piece one of the best of the evening. Adele Lortie brought clearness of diction and a certain amount of acting ability to the part of Dame Caruthers, and carried off successfully the third (so say we) best piece, namely, "The screw may twist and the wrack may turn."

The make-up was not as obtrusively bad as at previous performances, but was still suggestive of the hazard.

Co-Eds Start Smoking Fad

Evansville, Ill.—Co-eds at Northwestern University have taken up pipe smoking. The fad started after the girls won the right to smoke in sorority houses and has become so wide spread that merchants have had to increase their stocks of pipes, including corn cobs. Whether or not the increased use of the briar has resulted in lowered consumption of cigarettes could not be learned. Merchants are wondering just how long the co-eds will continue the fad.

"What! No Football?"

Can a college exist without football? This question is answered in a recent issue of The New York Times. The article reads as follows:

A Missouri college, during the athletic fates, has deliberately abolished intercollegiate football. And as part of the step, it has made a careful check-up to see what the effects would be on its ability to hold students, on the kind of students attracted, and on public favor. The results, showing almost no adverse effects and some favorable ones, are now available.

Westminster College is one of the oldest institutions of higher learning in the State. Founded in 1849, it has been operated continuously ever since. It is strictly a liberal arts college, conservative scholastically, and of exceptionally high educational standards. It admits only men and has a limitation on its freshman class.

Having finished last season with an undefeated team, and having a coach of outstanding ability and a wealth of letter men returning, the college board of trustees and the faculty nevertheless decided to abandon the sport. It was felt that football was being unduly emphasized and that there was a tendency in college athletics in general to raise them from their rightful place to the point of folly. It was thought that football had even a somewhat demoralizing effect on the student body, and it was certain that the cost of the sport was quite out of proportion to the resources of the college. The economic depression was the last straw in turning the scales.

The action raised a storm. The undergraduates almost unanimously protested and the younger alumni made a determined effort to have the trustees reverse their step. When this attempt failed there was an unceasing fall of dissatisfaction, and many gloomy predictions.

The Outcome
Actually, the step seems to have made no difference. The older men have not transferred to institutions supporting football, as was predicted. Last year 87 per cent of the preceding year's junior class returned as seniors. This year the percentage is exactly the same. Last year 63 per cent of the preceding year's sophomore class returned as juniors. This year 67 per cent has returned, a gain of 4 per cent. Last year 71 per cent of the preceding freshman class returned as sophomores; this year 67 per cent, a loss of 4 per cent. This loss, it is said, is distinctly and directly due to financial considerations and is in no way attributable to the football issue. To cite one instance one fraternity lost six of last year's freshmen because of bank failures and similar financial troubles. Every one of the six would be registered in the college today had times been normal. A few of the football lettermen transferred, but the college lost as many men when a student orchestra was employed by a cafe in a neighboring college town as it did by the transfer of lettermen.

The Enrollment Record

Although Westminster is the most expensive institution in the State, its total enrollment dropped only 9 per cent. The published figures of the Missouri University show a loss of 16 per cent. Westminster had a loss of 25 per cent in freshmen, all, of course, being men. Missouri University had a loss of 35 per cent in freshmen in the whole institution—which figures include the law school, with the largest enrolment of freshmen in the university's history. And two other colleges belonging to the Missouri College Union and in Westminster's class, both accentuating football and each with a formidable eleven, each show a loss of nearly 50 per cent in freshmen. out down to twenty-one from whom to choose for his starting line.

Speed and Combination

Harvard seems most adept in speedy combination play aided by a stellar pair of defence men to look after that end of the game. As has featured their teams of late, they show dazzling speed. Saltonstall, Baldwin, and Putnam will start in the forward line. DeGue will start in the cage and Martin will be at one defence position. The following will most likely be used in the game: Beale, Braggiotti, Clapp, Dow, Everett, Gleason, Hasler, Holmes, Lincoln, Mittell, Fell, Pruyn, Thompson, Watts, Ware, Wolcott and Reece.

Coach Bell will use Powers, McHugh, Melkejohn, Shaughnessy, McGill, Farquharson, G. Crutchfield, N. Crutchfield, Farmer, and Robertson.

Valery's Poetry Has Extensive Influence Among Literateurs

young French writers who had been struck to such an extent by some of his early works, that they had not forgotten them.

In 1917 he published La Juene Parque, which he claimed to have rewritten a hundred times. There then followed several other works, all of which were great successes, and in 1925, he was elected to the French Academy to replace Anatole France.

Poems On One Theme

His poetry is the most original of his works. It is extremely limited, but bears on one theme, treated in a variety of manners; that is, the opposition of contemplation, on the one hand, and action on the other.

In "Le Serpent," the action of the Creating Power in producing the serpent, which brought man from his original innocence, is described as "flaw in your perfect diamond."

In his poems, he makes wonderful use of verbal music, but this is only a detail; he is interested only in the description of his own thoughts. He does not consider poetry the production of beautiful sound, but every word he writes has a reason for its being there. He believed that poets should use classical measures, and follows this rule himself. He uses classical system of versification throughout, believing that the poet, by following these rules, has a great initial advantage, in that he knows already all the resources open to him.

His prose is secondary to his poetry, but, stated Professor Noad, it is a fine contribution to European literature. He is attracted to the depiction of a single figure, the intellectual superman, and in his "Introduction to the Method of Leonardo da Vinci," he tries to find out what it is that makes genius. He comes to the conclusion that the genius is the man who uses to the full the mental potentialities with which we are all endowed.

The genius, Valery thought, had the faculty of mind which is able to combine things that other minds leave single, and consequently, unoperative. In "Monsieur Teste," he describes the superman, who utilizes to the full his mental possibilities.

In conclusion, Professor Noad pointed out that Valery's true poetic mind may be shown that in the fact that he tried to escape from poetry into ordinary life, but that his poetic genius came to the fore even twenty years later. Valery combines in his poetry musical form, with intellectual material. In addition, he brought the work of the poet into combination with the activity of the scientist. He realizes that, though outward conditions are different, the actions of their minds are the same.

In this section show that Westminster fared remarkably well.

The character of the entering class, moreover, while smaller in numbers, was conceded the best in personnel in years. The fraternities had more material than could be assimilated. Scholarship was unusually high, while many entering students had been high school football players. During the whole summer only six prospective students indicated that the absence of football would affect their choice of college. Naturally, the Westminster authorities diligently sought to ascertain the effect of this action. So far as could be determined, it was negligible.

As for that intangible thing called college spirit, it was deemed impossible to have an undergraduate body enthuse over the college without the inspiration of a winning eleven. But faculty and upperclassmen are practically of one opinion: that there is a better spirit on the campus, a more enthusiastic tone among the students than has been noted for years. Possibly the reason is because every one of the approximately 300 men is himself actively interested in some sport, as compared with former times, when about forty men were on the football field and the rest of the student body had little to do but complain.
